Eight days a week

We're in business to save our home planet.

This is the challenge Yvon Chouinard gave Patagonia when he updated our reason for being in 2018 for the first time in years. It's a lofty goal, and one that shapes every item of clothing, every donation, every activist campaign. It's also one we'll never reach on our own.

Patagonia Group Sales is one way we get professionals all over the world involved in solving our intertwined social and environmental crisis. Through the program, like-minded companies can outfit their teams with products that not only offer top-tier performance but also are built using recycled fabrics and designed for repairability, to reduce the need for virgin materials and to extend their life span as much as possible. Many are made in Fair Trade Certified® factories, to support the workers who make them, and many are also made with fibers like organic cotton or hemp, which are grown with lower environmental impacts than conventional crops.

We also believe that a product's life span shouldn't be limited to business hours. So, choose the best gear for your team—from outerwear to warm-yet-wicking baselayers to our tough-as-nails Workwear line—knowing it will keep them warm, dry and comfortable through the workweek and on any out-of-office trips through the weekend.

You're proud of your employees. We're proud to help them enjoy the planet as passionately as they're working to save it, during business hours and beyond.

Customer Testimonial

“Our work brings us to remote rivers in all corners of the US, and during all seasons. Sometimes, we are thrashing through dense willow brush and thorny blackberries in the heat of late summer. Other times, we’re tested by unrelenting, bone-chilling rains in the Pacific Northwest. When we’re lucky, it’s somewhere in between. We regularly use Patagonia packs, jackets and layers to keep us comfortable (and stylish) in all conditions.”

No business on a dead planet

Being a 1% for the Planet® member and Certified B Corp.

Why did Yvon Chouinard update our official purpose statement to “We’re in business to save our home planet”? It’s because we believe business can play a crucial role in stopping the myriad threats facing life on Earth, but only if those businesses take concrete action toward protecting the well-being of our planet and its denizens. We also believe such efforts mustn’t come at the cost of success. In fact, history has proved they can even strengthen a company’s bottom line ... and help save the planet in the process.

In 1985, Patagonia began pledging 1 percent of our sales to the preservation and restoration of our natural environment; in 2002, Chouinard and Craig Mathews, owner of Blue Ribbon Flies, founded 1% for the Planet, a nonprofit that encourages other businesses to follow their example. The organization now has over 4,800 members—from companies like New Belgium Brewing to individuals like musician Jack Johnson—who’ve donated more than $784 million to domestic and international grassroots environmental groups.

We took another more holistic step in December 2011 when we became a Certified B Corporation, and in January 2012 we formally registered as the first benefit corporation in the state of California. B Corp certification means our company’s overall environmental and social performance has been measured and independently verified by third-party company B Lab. Their evaluation goes beyond products or even the supply chain, encompassing a company’s operations, business model, community impact, materials, charitable donations, employee benefits and—as Chouinard noted—even its purpose statement.

On September 14, 2022, Patagonia announced a new ownership model. “We’re making Earth our only shareholder,” said founder Yvon Chouinard. Now, every dollar that is not reinvested into Patagonia will be distributed as dividends to protect the planet. Nancy Pastor

The skeleton in our closet

A not-so-spooky story about recycled bags.

Our Black Hole® duffels have been a lot of places since they were first released in the 1990s. They've weathered the snowiest mountains, the thickest jungles, the hottest deserts and the most chaotic city streets, traveling on all manner of air, water, land and animal transport with a sheeny flair.

But that iconic, glossy exterior is also the bag's dirtiest secret.

The material in question is TPU, short for thermoplastic polyurethane, and it's this flexible plastic coating that makes Black Hole fabric so resistant to water, abrasion and general abuse. It's not the main ingredient—think weatherproof paint applied to an already sturdy house—yet it makes up nearly half the fabric's weight. And, until recently, there was no recycled alternative. "It was that one skeleton in the closet," says equipment designer Evan Daniel.

We've been using recycled materials for the body fabric, webbing and daisy-chain loops of our Black Hole bags since 2018 and had been considering similar options for TPU since 2016. We knew the material was out there and knew it could repurpose a lot of waste: For every 1,000 pounds of virgin TPU created, 75 pounds are thrown out. But we were less certain if we could make the swap and preserve the renowned Black Hole sturdiness.

"Everything was telling us not to do recycled TPU," Daniel says. "Doing the right thing often causes headaches later."

So, we started slowly. We experimented on the new material in the lab. We took one duffel on climbing trips in Colorado and California, and then chucked it out of a bush plane on to an Alaskan glacier. With each test, we made tweaks and adjustments until we were sure the recycled fabric—which has a matte finish instead of the classic gloss—matched its predecessor's unwavering durability.

"There's no 'blue bin' for recycled TPU," Daniel says. "And when you're dealing with trash, there's lots of things you can't control. It's like a puzzle to solve."

Solve we did. We began using recycled TPU for select Black Hole bags in Fall 2022—an industry first. In Spring 2024, we used the new material in Black Hole duffels, and in Fall 2024, we made the swap for our rolling duffels, so now the entire line features recycled TPU.

The new Black Hole bags may not have their iconic shine, but that's just fine with us. Traveling is a lot easier without a skeleton in your duffel.
